NOTICES ARE SENT TO CONTRACTORS

Commissioners Want to Know About Status of Road Improvements in Jackson Township.

BONDSMEN ALSO NOTIFIED

Contracts Will Be Considered in Absence of Contractors Unless Appear Next Term.

Albert Luedtke, county auditor, has notified the contractors and their bondsmen for the four road improvements in Jackson township, that the contracts will be considered at the next term of the county commissioners Monday, February 3. The letters serve notice that unless the contractors and bondsmen are represented in person or by representative the matter will be considered in their absence. It is expected that each of the companies will be represented. This action is taken by the commissioners in order that the exact status of the road improvements may be known immediately. What action is taken will be determined after the contractors have been given opportunity to explain the long delay in completing the work.

The Boone Construction Company was given the contracts for the permanent improvement with concrete of the West Second street road, the Walnut street road and the High street road. The estate of James DeGolyer, deceased, is held responsible for the completion of the Stahl road which is to be improved with crushed stone.

The Boone Construction Company, it is stated, is not in a strong financial condition, and the matter of completing the contracts held by this concern has already been taken up with the bonding company. Upon the death of Mr. DeGolyer, the contract for the Stahl road was sold to Ewing Shields by the estate. The estate is held responsible to the county for the completion of the road. The Jackson County Loan & Trust Company is administrator for the state. Mr. Shields went into bankruptcy following his purchase of the contract and only a small amount of the work was done. For more than a year the road has not been touched and is in bad condition most of the year.

Whether or not the county can readvertise for bids and hold the original bondsmen liable for any difference in cost of construction is a matter that has not yet been definitely determined. However, some local attorneys declare that the commissioners have authority under the law to readvertise for new bids when the original contractors default and the bondsmen will be required to pay any excess cost above the original contract. The bonds for these roads were sold several years ago with the expectation that the work would be completed without delay.

Jackson township people are hopeful that the commissioners will take immediate action in the matter so that the improvements can be completed before another winter.

LIEBKNECHT KILLED BY AN ESCORT OF GUARDS

Rosa Luxemburg, Chief Assistant, Was Punctured From Berlin.

By United Press.
Berlin, January 17—Carl Liebknecht, the most dramatic figure in Germany, was shot dead while trying to escape from a heavy escort of government troops. At the same time his chief assistant, Rosa Luxemburg, was lynched by a mob. The Spartan leader was trapped in his home and taken prisoner with his wife and sons. The latter were taken to jail. Liebknecht was being taken to military headquarters when he suddenly drew a knife when he stabbed one of the guards, killing him. The guards then shot him.

LICENSE RULE ON FOOD WITHDRAWN

Grocers Notified by Food Administration That There Will Be No Further Inspections.

REGULATIONS ARE CANCELLED

Only Few Commodities Remain Under Restrictions—Penalizing Authority is Removed.

Local grocers and other dealers in food commodities have been notified by the Indiana division of the United States food administration that all license requirements in connection with food control have been withdrawn except for the distribution of a few articles. Following the signing of the armistice articles of food which were under government license regulation have been withdrawn one by one until only a few are still under the restrictions. Originally sixty-four articles handled by wholesale grocers were under license, but forty of these have been removed and it is expected that the others will be withdrawn very soon.

The only articles remaining under food regulation are: Wheat, corn, oats, rye, barley, wheat mill feeds, copra, palm kernel, peanuts cottonseed and its products, oleomargarine and butter substitutes, all animal fats and oils, butter, cheese, eggs, sugar and malt.

In connection with this announcement, Dr. Harry E. Barnard, federal food administrator for Indiana, stated that except for the supervision over the distribution of the above list, the food administration has no power to penalize. This means that any offender against the food regulations, whose license may have been revoked or suspended, may resume any line of business not now requiring a license, but that the revocation or suspension remains in effect with respect to commodities or activities that still require a license. In other words a dealer may operate in all lines of distribution except those named.

DRASTIC BILL PROPOSED TO ENFORCE PROHIBITION LAW

Senator Masters Would Confiscate Vehicle in Which Intoxicating Liquor is Brought Into State.

By United Press.
Indianapolis, January 17—The senate today indefinitely postponed action on the Beardsley woman's suffrage amendment, passed by the 1917 legislation. The same action was taken on the amendment providing that salaries of officials cannot be raised during their term of office. This clears the way for action on the administration's constitutional amendments which have been introduced.

Senator Retherford, Anderson, introduced a resolution protesting against the proposed 20 percent. on admissions to theaters provided in the federal revenue bill.

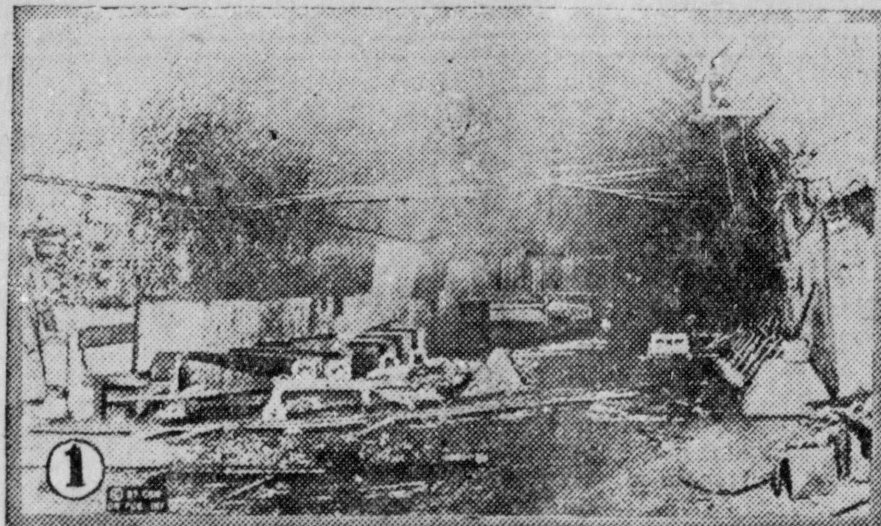

The senate passed the bill appropriating $100,000 to pay the expenses of the session.

Senator Masters introduced a bill providing that persons bringing liquor into the state in an automobile or other vehicles will have their vehicle confiscated by the state. A bill by Senator Strode provides that persons obtaining a divorce in Indiana shall be prohibited from marrying again within two years following the granting of the divorce.

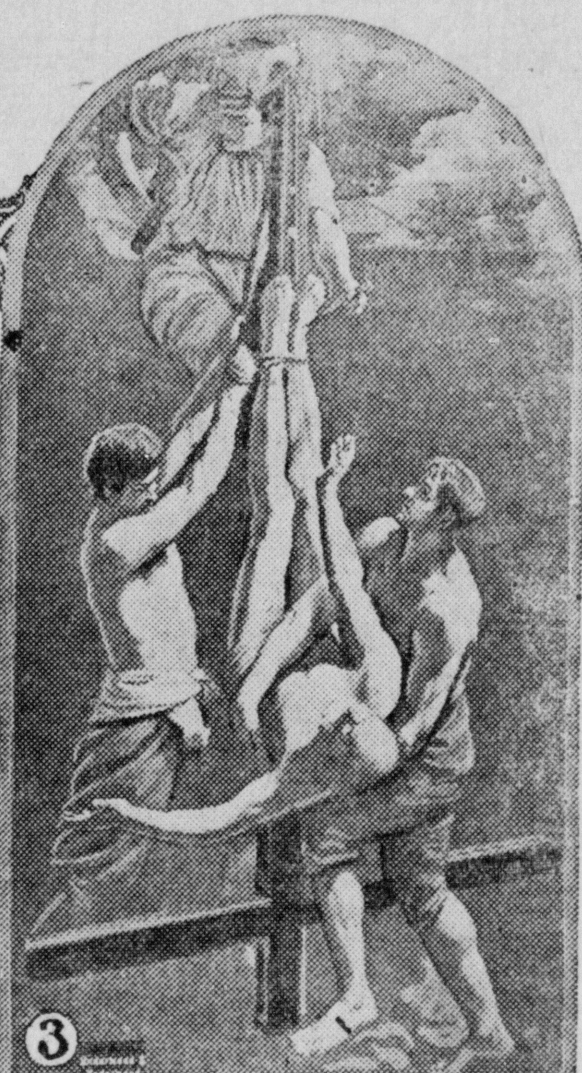

The administration bill providing for a department of insurance was introduced in the senate today by Senator Alldredge. Representative Lowe introduced a bill abolishing the 20 cents per mile traveling expenses to legislators and granting all legislators only their actual expenses.

Representative Hamilton presented a measure providing that all foreign made goods sold in Indiana shall be stamped with the name of the country where they are manufactured.

Mrs. J. Henry Schafstahl, of Hamilton township was here today the guest of her daughters, Misses Ethel and Lillian Schafstahl.

Representative Butler Sends Out Letters Relative to Proposed Tax Reform Measure.

SECTIONS ARE EXPLAINED

Bankers and Others Asked to Discuss Provisions of the Bill With Interested Citizens.

Frank B. Butler, representative from Jackson county to the state legislature, believes that the best way to ascertain the merits of proposed legislation is to seek the opinion and advice of the public. It was with this in mind that he has sent letters to bankers and others in Jackson county, asking for suggestions relative to the tax legislation before the legislature. He recognizes that this is a question in which every citizen in the county is interested and welcomes any information that will be given him.

The letter which he has sent out explains some provisions of the bill to which objections have been made. The communication follows:

"Gentlemen:
"I am sending you under separate cover a copy of the proposed tax bill which is before the legislature. I would be glad if you will take the time to give this careful attention and discuss it with your patrons so far as you may find time.

"I want to call your attention to the fact that in this copy reference to mortgage exemptions was, through an oversight omitted, but it

SERBS ATTEMPT TO ABOLISH MONTENEGRIN SOVEREIGNTY

Bloody Fighting Results, Showing Loyalty of People to King Nicholas.

By United Press.
Paris, January 17—Bloody fighting, with heavy losses on both sides, has resulted from an alleged attempt by Serbians to forcibly abolish Montenegrin sovereignty, according to official dispatches received here today by Montenegrin representatives. Twenty thousand Montenegrins are said to have participated in an uprising against the Serbs.

The report that King Nicholas is opposed to inclusion of Montenegro in the proposed Jugo-Slav state is untrue, notwithstanding Serbian protestations to the contrary. The Montenegrins declared their king demands a constituent assembly shall be the sovereignty of the new state rather than having it automatically come under Serbian dynasty. The uprising is cited as proof that the majority of the people stand by the king.

SUFFRAGE BILL IS BEFORE THE HOUSE

Measure Provides Women in Indiana May Vote Only for Presidential Electors.

SPECIAL BALLOTS A FEATURE

Registration in Same Manner as Required of Men Included in Text in Bill.

By United Press.
Indianapolis, January 17—Representative Charles A. Johnson, of Gas City, introduced the presidential woman suffrage bill in the House today.

The new bill grants women citizens in Indiana only the right to vote for presidential electors and provides that special ballots shall be prepared for women at presidential elections. These ballots will include only the names of candidates for presidential electors.

While the Senate committee on constitutional revision is attempting to overcome the difficulties encountered in the Boardsley amendment, which was passed by the 1917 session of the legislature, by rejecting that measure in order that a substitute amendment may be launched, the presidential suffrage measure will probably be pushed through the House and sent into the Senate, where immediate action is predicted by suffrage leaders. Practically no opposition is expected to the Johnson bill, leaders in the Indiana Woman's Franchise League stated today.

Mrs. Richard E. Edwards, of Peru, president of the Indiana Woman's Franchise League, stated today that despite the unavoidable delay in the matter of the Boardsley amendment, there is no cause for pessimism on the part of the women of the state. The attitude of the major portion of the Democratic members of the Senate in taking up the lead of the Republican members in the suffragette matters is most encouraging, Mrs. Edwards said.

"The text of the bill introduced by Representative Johnson follows:

"All women citizens of the United States of twenty-one years and upwards, who shall have resided in the State during the six months, and in the ward or precinct thirty days, immediately preceding any election, shall be entitled to vote for presidential electors, subject to the provisions of law regulating the votes of male electors, if she shall have been duly registered according to law.

"Separate ballot boxes and ballots shall be provided for women citizens in each election precinct, which ballots shall contain the names of the candidates for presi-

SECRET SESSIONS MEET OPPOSITION

Newspaper Correspondents Insist Upon Open Discussions by Peace Congress.

OPEN COVENANTS OF PEACE

Interest in This Matter Overshadows The Russian Question and Other Vital Matters.

By United Press.

Paris, Jan. 17—The questions of representation for the people themselves, through the newspaper correspondents, today took precedence over every other problem before the peace conferences.

Interest in this matter was evidenced by the fact that the league of nations, the Russian situation and other vital subjects had been subordinated to arriving at an amicable solution of the manner in which the proceedings at the peace table are to be made public.

President Wilson is understood to be leading the fight for one of his principal points—"open covenants of peace, openly arrived at." He brought up the question of publicity during both yesterday's and Wednesday's conferences.

There was every indication today that a satisfactory agreement would soon be reached between the correspondents and the peace delegates. A program containing the newspaper men's demands regarding publicity will be submitted by a committee composed of three representatives each of the American, British, French and Italian correspondents and two representatives of the other sections of the allied press.

The war between democracy and terrorism will be largely decided at the international labor and socialist congress in Berne this month, declared Arthur Henderson, British leader, in an interview with the United Press today.

Henderson explained this was the reason the government had tacitly supported the proposal of British labor demand that Russian delegates be admitted to the congress.

"The last hope in democracies is at stake," he said. "The issue is democracy versus terrorism. Between the two the western world cannot long delay its choice.

"We speak for organized society in its most real sense. We are prepared to stand between civilization and chaos. Now that the governments are beginning to realize that fact, there is little likelihood of them ever reverting to the idea that we (labor men) are to be feared."

Henderson said the allied laborites and socialists have drawn up the program for their principles, the reforms they desire, etc., which they are ready now to present to the representatives of the central powers and neutral nations. The Berne congress will differ from the peace conference in this respect, since the allies will be occupied at Paris for months in reaching an agreement before presenting their program to the central powers.

French and British labor representatives were engaged in final conferences with the associated peace delegates today, arranging methods for communicating the recommendations at the Berne congress to the peace conference.

Henderson said it was possible the arrival of the German delegates would be delayed, because of the internal situation in their country. Although the congress does not convene until the 27th, he left for Berne today to co-operate in final arrangements for the meeting.

TAXING LEGISLATION.

The tax reform bill which is to be considered by the Indiana legislature is one of the most important and far-reaching measures with which the present session will deal. It is difficult to enact tax laws that will be uniformly fair and equitable for all classes of property throughout the state. And, probably no legislation that is proposed is watched more closely and criticised more thoroughly than that which is designed to raise revenue. The reason for this, of course, is that practically every citizen is affected directly.

There has been considerable criticism of the proposed new tax law, yet the majority of the objections have been made by critics who were not familiar with the provisions of the bill or who attacked it for whatever political effect it might have. Tax legislation is above the sphere of politics. It strikes direct at the heart of the welfare of the commonwealth and all citizens are equally interested in any changes that may be considered. Governor Goodrich and the state board of tax commission have recognized this fact and have discussed the proposed provisions with the leading authorities of the state, regardless of political affiliations.

There is no question but that the state has outgrown its present tax laws. The rates in every division of the government have been mounting higher and higher until the taxes now practically eat up the revenue on some classes of property. Such a system is apparently and admittedly bad and the time has come for a change. The new law proposes to list a larger amount of so-called intangible property much of which is now withheld from the assessors. At the same time a lower rate would be provided, probably half of what is not paid. As a result the burden would fall more equitably. It has been argued that if the amount of intangible property listed is increased and the rate remains the same the burden will be heavier than at present. However, it is provided that the state board cannot increase the amount of the taxes. It is obvious that much property bringing a small percentage of revenue would be brought upon the books if the tax rate were such that the owner would not have to give all of his profit in taxes. Other safeguards which are not now afforded are provided in the proposed bill. Undoubtedly it would give better protection for all classes of property.

Soldiers' Letters

Tells of Experiences.

The following are extracts from recent letters written by Arthur O. Weddell to his wife and parents at Medora, Ind., R. R. 2.

December 15, 1918.

My dear Hazel and Parents:

I will now try to tell you a few of my many adventures. We left Hoboken, New Jersey, August 31 (Saturday evening) on the U. S. S. Leviathan and landed at Brest, France, September 7, so you see we were just on the water a week. We stayed on the boat until Sunday evening and just at dark on Sunday I took my first step on French soil which was very soft caused by months of rain. Well there was where our first battle took place "The Battle of Brest." It was raining when we left the boat and we made a four or five mile hike with full equipment on our backs. It was some battle "Dad." Finally we halted on a hillside and the order was given to pitch tents, so we put up our "Puppy Tents" there in the dark and rain and crawled in them. We had one blanket apiece. We stayed at Brest until Wednesday and it was then I was attacked with the "Flu." I was in the hospital about a week, then I was sent to a casual camp about two miles from Brest. After this I was sent to "Camp Hunt" which is about twenty miles south of Bordeaux. Then I was sent back to my company again.

Will write as I promised in my last letter and tell you about my visit at Rennes yesterday. I left camp at seven o'clock on "a little toy train" and arrived at Rennes (which is about 30 miles from Camp) about half past nine, so you see we didn't travel very fast. I certainly had a wonderful trip and saw things tourists would go from one side of the globe to the other to see. Several boys from the camp went but when we arrived at Rennes we scattered in different directions and I found myself alone in a great city, but none of the rest of the boys knew any more about the place than I. I set out to see all the city I could. I found the streets to be narrower than the ones in the state and nearly everything is different in some way or other. Yesterday was market day so I found market street crowded with truck growers who had come to sell their produce. I tried to see everything that was to be seen, but of course, that was impossible as I only had until four o'clock in the evening to my credit. I kept going until I began to feel hungry so I thought I would leave off my sight seeing until after dinner. I stopped at a fine Hotel as I had made up my mind to have a swell dinner for once and I certainly got that dinner. I had eggs, pork chops, French fried potatoes, butter, jam and a bottle of champagne all for "twelve Francs." It was the best eats I had since I left the states. I was now ready to resume my sight seeing. I went to the American Y. M. C. A. and there I found a "Belgium Council" who devotes all his time in showing the American boys the sights of the city. The first place we hit was the Palace of Justice and it was certainly a wonderful place. I decided I had seen the minor scenes in the morning and had missed the greater. I wish I was able to express myself here, but I can't begin to tell you of the wonderful things I saw. I have a bunch of cards showing the different scenes I will send today and tell you about them when I get home for I saw everything the pictures represent. This building was built in the sixteenth century and nearly every part is hand carved. You can notice the ceiling of the rooms on the cards. The logs were laid in the roof for the ceiling and then were carved. In one room there was a picture of a criminal carved in the ceiling and he is always looking at you no matter what part of the room you are he is looking straight at you. It's simply wonderful to think of the great work that was done centuries ago and can't be done today with all our machinery and inventions. We went into the great Hall which you will see on the cards. This is a very historic place. Just three weeks after the great war was declared "The king of England" "President of France" "President or Ruler of Belgium" and "Czar of Russia" all met at this Hall and had a great banquet and also held a consultation. We next went into the "Chamber of Parliament." It is here all the great men meet in the presence of the King and Queen and make laws. Of course France no longer has a King but this was used when in the hands of "Britanny." It is still used today but they don't have a king. The King had a box on the side of the wall where he would sit and over in the opposite corner was a similar box for the Queen. The walls of the room are covered with "tapestries" all needle work which took years and years to make and the pictures

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson III. January 19

THE PASSOVER

Exodus 12:1-36.

GOLDEN TEXT: For even Christ our passover was sacrificed for us.—1 Corinthians 5-7.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Psalms 106: 34-38, Matthew 26:26-29; Hebrews 11:28.

1. The Passover Instituted (12:1-23).

1. The time set (v. 2). With the institution of the Passover came a change in the order of time. The common year was rolling on as usual, but with reference to his chosen people the order is interrupted and everything is made to date from this. This signifies that redemption is the first step in real life. "Old things have passed away, all things have become new." Before this the man was dead in trespass and sin; now he has arisen to walk in newness of life. All before redemption counts for naught. The world thinks that real life ends when one accepts Christ, but this is a grave mistake. It is the beginning of real life.

2. The lamb set apart (v. 3). This previous setting apart of the lamb typifies the foreordination of Christ to be our Saviour. Redemption was not an afterthought of God (1 Peter 1:18-20). This lamb must be a male without blemish, indicating that it must be both representative and perfect.

3. The lamb was killed by the whole congregation (v. 6). This shows that it was not for the individual only, but for the entire assembly. The setting apart of the lamb was not sufficient, it must be killed, for "without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sins." The lamb might have been tied to the door of the Israelites that night, but there would have been no salvation, notwithstanding its perfection. Had Christ's spotless life continued till the present time and his matchless teaching gone on without interruption, not a single soul would have been saved, for "Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die it abideth alone." (John 12:24).

4. The blood of the slain lamb was to be placed upon the sideposts and lintels of the door (v. 7). It was not sprinkled upon the threshold, as it must not be trampled under foot (Hebrews 10:29). When the destroyer passed through the land he passed over the houses where the door posts were sprinkled with blood. This blood was the evidence that a substitute had been offered for them. They could rest absolutely secure, because the matter had been settled according to divine arrangement. The blood was the ground of peace. The assurance is not when you feel your sins are pardoned, but "when I see the blood I will pass over you."

5. Israel feeding upon the lamb (vv. 8-10). This denotes fellowship. Judgment must precede feasting. The eating of unleavened bread signifies that no sin is connected or allowed in fellowship with Christ. All who have entered into the power of the cross will put away sin.

6. They ate the passover ready for action (v. 11). The loins being girt about, betokens separation from sin and preparation and readiness for service. The feet being shod indicates their willingness to leave the land. The staff in the hand indicates their nature as pilgrims leaning upon a support outside of themselves. They were to leave behind them the place of death and darkness and march toward the promised land.

7. The uncircumcised denied participation in the feast (vv. 43-49). Circumcision was typical of regeneration. The significance of the requirement is that only those who have become new creatures by the power of the cross have a right to sit at the Passover feast.

II. The Significance of the Passover (12:24-28).

It was a memorial institution, calling to mind the deliverance of the Israelites from Egyptian bondage—God's interposition on their behalf, freeing them from their oppression. This was to be taught to their children when they came into the land, from generation to generation.

III. The Awful Judgment (12:29, 30). That night the destroyer passed through Egypt and slew the first born in every home where the blood was not found. An awful cry went up from Egypt that night.

IV. The Great Deliverance (12:31-36).

So mighty was this stroke that Pharaoh called for Moses in the night and requested him to be gone with his flocks and herds.

ISRAEL CROSSING THE RED SEA.
Exodus 14:13-15:21.

wove in them are wonderful to look at. "Scenes of Battles between England and France" in olden times, "Joan of Arc," "The Crowning of the first King of England." They are certainly fine. Makes a fellow feel kind of funny to be in there for the pictures seem almost lifelike.

Here at this building is the civil court and the criminal court and also the place where they are executed. You have heard of the guillotine or chopping block where the convicted get their heads cut off. I got to see this room. They have a deep place with high stone walls on all sides and the chopping block in the center. The convicted are placed in here and killed. France uses this kind of punishment yet today. I knew it used to be the custom but I was surprised when I heard they still use it. The Belgian had me to sit down in the big chairs where the King and Queen used to sit and say! I felt big. There are thousands of other things at the "Palace of Justice" to tell about but I will stop here for I suspect you are tired hearing it but it was so great I never will forget it. It was worth my trip to France alone. We next went to the "Cathedral" and it was the most magnificent place I ever saw. It was built in Sixteen hundred and thirteen. In the center were two large posts of marble that were thirty five feet high and five feet in diameter. They were just in two pieces and each part weight between twenty-five and thirty tons. What looks strange to me is how the people could get these huge blocks of marble out of the ground and place them there in that day and age of the world for they didn't have any machinery to speak of in those times. There were so many sights in the "Cathedral" that I can't hold them all in mind, but one thing more I want to tell, that's about the tombs of some of the old "Priests" that died centuries ago. One of these priests (I can't recall his name) died about eight hundred years ago and was embalmed and placed in a glass tomb and he looks just like he had died yesterday. That was a great sight. I had often heard about bodies that had been preserved for hundreds of years but I had never dreamed of seeing any of them. By this time we had to stop as it was about train time and after thanking my "Belgian" friend we shook hands and parted. He is going back to Belgium in January, so I suppose he will be as glad to get home at I. He speaks English fairly well and with what little French I have picked up we could carry on a pretty good conversation. I will leave off here with my story and we will jump our minds back to Indiana once more. How is everybody getting along. Fine, I hope. Take good care of yourselves and Arthur Olin, Jr. I think I will be home in a couple of months. I sure hope so, anyway. This leaves me in excellent health. Hope you are all the same.

Your loving husband and son,
Arthur O. Weddell.

The list of licenses commodities handled by retail grocers is now so small, Dr. Barnard says, that there will be no further inspection of groceries by the food administration.

Notice of the modification of the food regulations has been received by C. H. Wiethoff, county food administrator. His office here was closed several weeks ago soon after the weekly and monthly report regulation affecting dealers was cancelled.

How Long Must I Suffer
From the Pangs of Rheumatism?

Is there no real relief in sight?

Doubtless like other sufferers, you have often asked yourself this question, which continues to remain unanswered.

Science has proven that your Rheumatism is caused by a germ in your blood, and the only way to reach it is by a remedy which eliminates and removes these little pain demons from your blood. This explains why liniments and lotions can do no permanent good, for they cannot possibly reach these germs which infect your blood by the millions.

S. S. S. has been successfully used for Rheumatism for more than fifty years. Try it to-day, and you will find yourself at last on the right track to get rid of your Rheumatism. You can get valuable advice about the treatment of your individual case by writing to the Chief Medical Adviser, Swift Specific Co., Dept. D, Atlanta, Ga.

Tired, Overworked Mothers
What You Need is Vinol

War conditions have made the demand upon a mother's time and energy unlimited. In their zeal to do all in their power for their loved ones, they continually overwork and are soon in a nervous, run-down condition. Vinol, the non-secret cod liver and iron tonic, will build you up and make you strong.

Whitman, Mass.

"I suffered from a nervous, run-down condition and loss of strength so it was hard for me to get around and do my work. After other medicines had failed to help me Vinol restored my health and strength and I heartily recommend it to anyone suffering from a nervous, run-down condition."—Mrs. R. M. Little.

Cleveland, Ohio.

"I keep house for my husband and myself and got into a weak, run-down condition, no strength, languid and no ambition. After doctoring for awhile and getting no better I tried Vinol and to my surprise it built me up and strengthened my whole system. It is certainly a good tonic."—Mrs. Wm. D. Dawson.

Idea of What Constitutes Real Bravery.

An English observer calls attention to the fact that our world war has destroyed the fear of being afraid. Heretofore, even to most distant antiquity, the one quality insisted on in the soldier was that he should be fearless and the more callously so the better. The faintest tremor of timidity was a black mark against the most respondent knight as well as the lowliest Bowman or halbardier, and the schooling for war was an utter defiance of the personal risk.

This theory held, as many will remember, even till the period of the Boer war, when the British suffered so severely in officers because it was held cowardly for a commander to seek cover. Men, then as now, felt fear, for that is one of flesh's attributes and, indeed, is one of the most valuable of human possessions, since fear is our protection from dangers and harms innumerable. We fear wild beasts to avoid them, snakes and spiders to increase our attention, storms and tempests that we may prepare means of escape from them.

So it was only in battle that chivalry insisted that man should be without fear, or pretend to be.

With the coming of new warfare, however, all lands at once came to a more sane understanding and the old physical bravery has given place to moral resolution. The man who now enters the hell of shell fire, of hurled flames and deadly gases, no longer attempts to fool himself into the belief that he is not afraid. He knows full well and only a stupid nature could avoid the knowledge that the human is at the mercy of forces a million times beyond his own ability to counter. The old knight might really believe he was able to unhorse all the enemies that rode against him and therefore might conceivably be without fear, but how can a soldier feel that way when facing modern weapons of destruction?

Therefore, it is no longer a disgrace to feel fear or to admit it; the only disgrace is to allow fear to prevent one doing his duty. How much finer fiber is needed for this new defiance!

Need for More Consuls.

The chairman of the shipping board has called the attention of congress and the people to the need of enlarging our consular service abroad, in view of the fact that our great merchant marine will be released for use in foreign trade.

Mr. Hurley tells us, observes the Independent (New York), that the United States will have 25,000,000 tons of merchant shipping by the end of 1920, and that as fast as these ships can be freed from military work they will enter commerce. The present consulates would be entirely inadequate to handle this enlarged business. There are not enough of them, their staffs are too small and they are handicapped by inexperience with duties that will be demanded and by antiquated regulations. Even now the burden of work, especially in the way of inquiries to be answered, is overtaxing the undermanned and underpaid force. Mr. Hurley therefore pleads that immediate steps be taken to remedy the situation.

"We need more consuls and larger consular staffs," he tells us. "If we do not provide them today and prepare for the great growth in our merchant marine and trade after the war, I fear that we shall suffer a serious breakdown."

You've Heard 'Em.

"Look here," said the city editor to the cub reporter, "you should write everything as briefly as possible. Instead of saying 'the middle-aged bald-headed performer in the hired aggregation of followers of Orpheus who nightly provide the harmony at one of our leading temples of mirth, seized his trombone firmly in his hands, placed his feverish lips to the mouth-piece and sounded thereon an unearthly tone like the wailing of a lost soul on the main street of Inferno'—now shorten that up."

So the reporter merely wrote: "The slip horn player in the orchestra blew a helva note."

Wonderful View From Stirling.

It is from the top of a sheer crag, more than 400 feet above the sea, that the famous "links" of the Forth may be seen to best advantage. It is always a wonderful view from Stirling castle, wonderful for its sheer beauty, and wonderful, too, for the wealth of history which surrounds every town and village which dots the plain, through which the river winds on, picking up the light here and there, vanishing into the haze of the distance, and then emerging again as the mist, maybe, suddenly rises; whilst far away on the eastern horizon, just a gray outline against the sky, is the Forth bridge, where the river has given way to the Firth.

The Grist

By ARCHIE CAMERON NEW

(Copyright, 1918, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

John Gates came out of a trance-like stupor and stared in disgust. He had not been the victim of a bad dream. No, he shivered, would that life were like that dream!

Two minutes before there had danced before his vision a picture of an old grist mill. He could see the trees lazily and happily brushing their leaves with every puff of wind, and the little dam that laughingly dashed its spray against its rocky formation. And his father, with his kindly old eyes and stooped shoulders, pouring into the mill's grist fine whole wheat.

And then he saw the pure-white flour, so much in keeping with the sacredly pure precincts about which he had scampered years before, barefoot, poor, but happy. And then the sweet smile of his mother—that dear, kindly soul, whose happiest mission was ministrations to his boyish whims and an appreciative father's wants. And then he woke up!

For a moment he surveyed himself sadly. Those bare toes of his boyhood were now encased in rich, comfortable shoes, showing off in marked contrast the worn carpet on which they rested. He fingered nervously the well-tailored clothes that long since had replaced torn, ragged overalls, and smiled bitterly. And then he looked up!

An old man bent over a desk several feet away seemed to remind him of the old miller, his father, with his sparse gray hairs and stooped shoulders—until he looked up. A pair of rascally, cunning eyes met Gates' furtively, and then darted to a rough-looking individual waiting, as was Gates, on one of the chairs in a row about the wall of the large outer office. A buzzer sounded and the door of the inner sanctum opened.

"It's your turn next," huskily whispered the old man to the other. "Leave it to Jerry Bletzman. He'll fix you up."

The man grunted unintelligibly and rose hesitatingly to his feet. He, like most of his waiting brethren, had come to be "fixed up." And Bletzman, the far-famed P. Gerald Bletzman, self-styled "counselor at law," was to do the fixing, or, rather, the "unfixing." For Bletzman's many hired henchmen proclaimed that no matrimonial knot was too hard for their patron to untie.

"Jes' leave it t' me," boomed a raucous voice, which Gates recognized as Bletzman's as he hurriedly pushed a spidery-looking young man out of his office. "I'll get somethin' on her. They ain't none o' them too foxy fer Bletzman, are they, Pete?"

Pete, his assistant, acquiesced speedily with a chuckle, and Bletzman bent a beady eye on the man who stood close to Pete's desk.

"Come right in," he welcomed the other scurvily, laying a sweaty palm on the client's sleeve. "Pete, bring th' gentleman's card in—now."

The door slammed and again the outer office subsided into a low murmur of voices.

So, mused Gates, this was what he had come to. A place where the sacred ties of marriage and motherhood were banded about like packing boxes and card-indexed like a case of measles. Br-r-r!

And across the room, instead of the sweet smile of his mother, a gray-haired woman in gay clothes smirked fraternally at him while waiting her turn.

This drove Gates' eyes to his lap, on which rested a neat package, which he now untied. Dragging forth a yellowish paper, he fell to reading it, and again it conjured forth visions from out of a happy past.

There was a great high-ceilinged parlor, smelling deliciously of fresh-picked blossoms, and echoing the sound of many laughing voices and the crinkle of many stiff party dresses. And a rose-bower in the center, under which an ecstatic couple were receiving congratulations. And Gates, as he read his marriage license, heard anew, as if it were yesterday, the little old pastor's solemn warning, "Whom God hath joined together, let no man put asunder."

"Partly well prepared, ain't yuh, mister?" The voice at Gates' elbow caused him to thrust the paper back in the packet, as he looked up to meet the leer of the man on his right. "My old woman swiped mine," continued the other, enviously. "Leastways, she must've given it t' th' guy she 'loped with. Cost me fifty extra t' get a new one. Ain't women th' darndest yeggs?"

Gates stared at him unseeing, but the last remark caused him to shiver anew. Lucille, his wife, a yegg? Never! She was a fine girl, through and through. They just couldn't get along—that was all. And some one had suggested Bletzman to him, and—

"Y'll come outa th' mill sadder an' poorer," vouchsafed another waiting one. "Bletzman'll see t' that."

"Out of the mill," echoed Gates to himself, in horror. To be sure, it was a mill; but what kind? Bletzman's mill swallowed up human souls and gave up what? Fine white flour? Could that hoydenish girl be likened to his father's flour? Or the decrepit, red-nosed wreck at his side who called his wife—a yegg? Or that old woman who flirted with him, and in whose brassy locket at her wrinkled neck there probably reposed pictures of her grandchildren? And was he to be made a party to "fixing" his wife—little winsome Lucille, whom he had wronged? Yes, he reflected, he had wronged her. No wonder she had complained of his friends coming to the house, drinking heavily, talking loosely and gambling madly. It had offended those finer sensibilities that now, in him, in the midst of Bletzman's revolting atmosphere, came back with a rush. Why hadn't he kept that promise to do so, the giving of which he had called hen-pecky? If he only had kept it—she might still be with—

Two doors opened simultaneously. Through one a burly individual shoved a man, and stood surveying the crowd of waiters. "Who's next?" he vociferated, in his best barber manner, as if getting divorced was no more than a shave. "Ah, the little lady?" He advanced toward the outer door and Gates followed him with his eyes. And then Gates staggered, in horror, to his feet. "Lucille!" cried Gates, as a pretty, slender young girl of obvious refinement hesitated at the threshold. "I want to see—Mr.—Bletzman," she announced in a low tone, and that individual was about to take her outstretched hand when he was roughly pushed out of the way and a tall, muscular figure stood between him and Mrs. Gates.

"Lucille," repeated John Gates, forcing her to meet his gaze, "you have no business—here—this—place."

"What in the—," Bletzman started to splutter, edging himself toward the couple, but again Gates pushed him aside.

"Come, Lucille," he urged, taking her hand, and leading her toward the door. "Out of this—den. This is not for us. I came—as I know you did—to get—a—divorce." He brushed his free hand across a feverish brow as if to wipe away an awful vision. "Come, this is not the mill for us. Let's—go—back to Lochinvar—to peace. Let's be happy as we were before I came to the city. We—"

"Do you know you are interfering with my business?" demanded Bletzman, in a seething rage. "This lady wants t' see—"

"Me," John finished Bletzman's sentence, restraining his clenched fists with an effort. "She wants to see me," he repeated. "Do you get that? And she will—exclusively—for the rest of her life—if she wants to." And then, as if the mighty Bletzman were no more than a troublesome beggar, Gates swung around and faced the trembling little girl he had promised to love, honor and protect. "Don't you, Lucille?"

As she nodded her head and buried her face in his sleeve, John led her into the corridor. He slammed the door and then breathed deeply.

"Even here the air is foul," he growled, putting his arm around her. "Come, let's hurry. We'll get the 3:20 train down. Dinner will be ready for us when we get there."

Inside the office Bletzman stared dumfounded at the closed door, then, shrugging his shoulders indifferently, ambled toward Pete's desk.

"Why didn't y' show 'im in quick?" he roared at Pete. "Couldn't y' tell he's th' kin' that think twice? If I'd seen him, I'd fixed it." Then he turned savagely toward the waiting line. "Next!"

LED WAY OF ENLIGHTENMENT

Building of Roads Marked Breaking Up of the Ignorance of the Dark Ages.

When light began to glimmer, day to break, on the dark ages (as we call them, and thereby impute to them, I think, along with their own darkness, no little of ours, much as the British seaman abroad has been heard to commiserate "them poor ignorant foreigners")—when daylight began to spread over the dark ages, what was the first thing to be seen? I will tell you what is the first thing I see. It is the roads.

I see the roads glimmer up out of the morning twilight with the many men, like ants, coming and going upon them; meeting, passing, overtaking; knights, merchants, carriers; justiciars with their trains, king's messengers, riding post; foot, friars—black, white and gray—pardoners, poor scholars, minstrels, beggar men; pack horses in files; pilgrims bound for Walsingham, Canterbury, or to Southampton, to ship there for Compostella and Rome.

I see the old Roman roads—Watling street, Ermine street, Icknield street, Akeman street, the Fosse way and the rest—hard metaled, built in five layers, from the foundation or pavement of fine earth hard beaten in, through layers of hard stones, small stones (both mixed with mortar), pounded nucleus of lime, clay or chalk, brick and tile, up to the paved surface, summum dorsum; one running north through Getting Oil From Peat.

In his method of converting peat into synthetic coal, S. C. Davidson, an engineer of Belfast, Ireland, returns to the peat vegetable oils that have weathered out, mixes with 15 per cent of pitch dust, and forms into square blocks by hydraulic pressure. This fuel is reported efficient and comparatively cheap.

Back in the Game.

"Another sign that the war is over." "Yes." "An old-fashioned stock promoter, wearing diamonds and flashy clothes, was in here the other day." "Well! Well!" "Those chaps are crawling out of their dugouts again!"—Birmingham Age-Herald.

A Realization.

"How's the prohibition workin' in Crimston Gulch?" "All right," replied Three Finger Sam. "The boys are beginnin' to realize that a man's conversation is jes' as interestin' when he's sober an' a heap more reliable."

ASKS OPINION OF PEOPLE BACK HOME

is in the bill as introduced, proposing to leave it same as it is under the present law. Some of the arguments as presented to me by the authors of the bill are as follows:

"Cannot increase taxes. Refer to sections 185 to 191.

"Will bring out a larger per cent of intangibles than are now listed for taxation, thus relieving real estate and tangible personal property of the burden they are now carrying. To substantiate their claim that it will do so they cite the fact that a very recent investigation reveals that in one township in Marion county the intangibles listed for taxation comprise one and one-half per cent of total property listed for taxation, in another nine-tenths of one per cent, and another six-tenths of one per cent. This, they think, is perhaps a fair average for the state wherein, according to United States statistics of a recent estimate, Indiana valuation of all property is eight billion dollars, of which amount three billion dollars is supposed to be of intangibles. This is thirty-seven and one-half per cent of the whole and less than one per cent actually going on the tax duplicate, thus placing the burden on tangibles and real estate. Real estate now is standing sixty-five per cent of the total taxation, which is due to the fact that intangibles are in hiding and will remain so as long as the taxes on them are actually confiscating the income on them, and in many instances eating on the principal. Their theory is that if assessed at but twenty-five per cent of their value, the income would not be entirely taken by taxation and they would be listed to a much larger degree than they are now and the income from taxes on them would very greatly exceed the taxes on the small per cent now listed and taxed at full value.

"One gentleman cites me his own case. He owns some small rentals and claims that thirty-seven per cent of his rent goes for taxes, which he thinks is almost confiscating his income, but says if he sold this property and put the proceeds into a savings bank at three per cent, his income would not pay the taxes and he would be very much tempted to not list the money for taxation, while if only assessed twenty-five per cent of its value he would not hesitate in giving it in to the assessor.

"These are some of the arguments as given to me by the State Tax Commission in behalf of the bill as introduced. You are no doubt hearing arguments against the bill and I give this information in fairness to the authors, and would be glad to hear from you or any of your patrons, and to furnish any further information on the subject so far as I am able.

FRENCH ARMY'S TREMENDOUS LOSS

3,000,000 soldiers of France, about one-half her entire army, have been killed or seriously wounded, according to Andre Tardie, French high commissioner to the United States. This enormous sacrifice for liberty is larger than that of any other country. America owes France a huge debt of gratitude, not only for this, but also for the discovery by her peasants of a perfect remedy for stomach, liver and intestinal ailments which is reported to have alleviated incalculable suffering, prevented many surgical operations and saved thousands of lives the world over. Geo. H. Mayr, for many years leading Chicago chemist, imports the ingredients and sells this remedy in America under the name of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy. It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. Spending Furlough Here.

Ernest T. Medcalfe radio service, U. S. S. New York, is spending a fifteen-day furlough with his sister, Mrs. R. C. Miller, West Fourth street, while his ship is lying in the harbor at New York awaiting repairs. Young Medcalfe enlisted in the naval service two years ago and has seen fourteen months' service overseas. His ship, the New York, was the flag ship of the six dreadnoughts forming the American battle squadron in foreign waters. During his fourteen months overseas Medcalfe saw service in policing the bottled up German fleet and was on hand when the Hun navy steamed out under the white flag. Both King George of England and King Albert of Belgium were several times aboard the New York.

Mrs. Miller has two brothers in France, Willis, for several years connected with the Detroit Free Press, is serving on the "Stars and Stripes," one of the principal American war newspapers published in Paris. The other brother, Lloyd, is with the 165th Infantry Band, Rainbow Division. Mrs. Miller has recently received a letter from him postmarked Coblenz, Germany.

Five O'clock Dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. Volley Jefferson entertained a number of friends Thursday evening with a five o'clock dinner in honor of Corporal Ben Larter who recently received his honorable discharge from military service and is spending the week here the guest of his sister, Mrs. Jerome Mitchell.

Notice.

Having been released from military service, I will resume my practice in diseases of the eye, ear, nose and throat, and fitting glasses immediately.

"ALIMON"

By FLORA HANDY.

Addie Drew was the most popular lass at Ports Harbor, and especially was she liked by Bennie Brandon, manager of the dry goods store of Hogskins & Smith; Addie was a jolly girl, and wherever she appeared at the "Corner" she was always surrounded by a bevy of young folks, and usually, if there were any of the masculine sex among the crowd, Bennie would stand glaring out of one of the big plate-glass windows at them. He had been walking home with Addie for a year now, and she was considered (in that country town) his girl.

Then appeared on the scene a city-bred young gentleman. He had been on the stage and in a circus; he could dance on his head, hands, or feet, and at a party, during dancing, he could call out "Alimon left or right" in such a way that he won the admiration of everybody, though no one knew what alimon meant. Addie being the best dancer and prettiest girl, naturally the new city chap devoted his attention most exclusively to her, and she was, if anything, a tease, and delighted in seeing Bennie's glaring eyes on the new beau. Of course, she was only teasing him, so Mattie Dean assured Bennie one night, when he came bursting into her parlor as she sat with Lem Barry, Bennie's best friend. She was ready for the concert up at the hall that a stray minstrel company was to give. "Oh, Bennie," she laughed, "don't let Addie see she is teasing you so!" "I'll let that beast she is flirting around with see so pretty soon, though," Bennie answered, ruffling his blond tresses in football style over his head; and with his pouting lips and flushed cheeks he looked not unlike a big puffed baby. "He's a coward, and everyone around here knows it," Bennie went on. "Look, this winter how he ran when Bob Leavitt got in the lake and called for help! He ran home fast as his bow-legs could carry him and left one fellow to get Bob out alone." "And who was the fellow that got Bob out?" Mattie asked, with a smiling wink at Lem.

Bennie kicked the footstool away from the chair where he sat. "He's a coward, that's all," he declared. "A rascally coward." "Why don't you prove it to Addie? That's all you would have to do," Lem said in his slow, deep drawl. "If I could!" Bennie exclaimed, his eyes flashing.

"Oh!" cried Mattie. "I have it, Bennie. Where is that bearskin you dressed up in New Year's as a Call-thumpian? Can't you put that on and scare him? He wasn't here New Year's and never saw you in it, and Addie did. It wouldn't frighten her and it is moonlight tonight."

"When they come from the concert, you could wait until they got to the lonely corner at the foot of the lane, and then growl like you did New Year's. My, what growls you did give, though! And that will prove to Addie what a coward he is, for he would run. The snow is deep and he couldn't go very fast; you could chase him."

They all laughed. "By Jove, I will," Bennie said; "you see I can't leave the store, and take her around to all these entertainments, and she don't like it, but that can't be helped. I have to tend to business. Say, there'll be fun tonight, though, Mattie—you've a head on you like a brick! Lem, you've got one fine girl there, and if it wasn't for Addie—" "You go now," growled Lem, "or I'll be dressing up as a bear too." Bennie went on laughing. During a lull in the concert Mattie whispered to Lem: "I told Addie Bennie was going to dress as a bear and scare Ralph Durkin, and she laughed." "You told her; why?" Lem asked slowly. "Well," Mattie sighed, "you see she has been altogether too friendly with that new fellow, and it will show who she cares most for. If she tells Ralph about it, why she cares most for him; if she don't tell him, why she cares most for Bennie." "U-mph," commented Lem, "that scan p is not to be compared with Benjamin; she will be a fool, but then I think you did right." Ralph was leaning the lane with Addie, and bending low he said: "You are the fairest girl I ever met," etc. Addie laughed and answered gayly: "Really, Mr. Durkin, you are a great flatterer." Then all of a sudden a terrible noise arrested their attention. Ralph stopped still in the road. Standing over the broken wall in the clear moonlight, was a horrible monster bear, his white teeth gleaming in a snarl and emitting hair-raising growls. "What—what," choked Ralph. "Y-e-a-u-o-w," he yelled. "Help—run for your life—f-e; it's a bear-r." And suiting the action to the word, he did run.

Addie stood in the road and screamed with laughter, and along the road farther there were suppressed giggles from a couple hid behind a tree. To help Ralph in his sprinting, Lem gave a fierce growl, worse than any yet, and the city chap yelled in his fear. Laughing now, and with the bear's head thrown back, Bennie came back to Addie.

"Isn't he brave, huh?" he grinned. "I'll wager he don't stop going all night." Then the strong fur arms caught the girl in a tight embrace. "Bennie," laughed Addie, "a bear hasn't got anything on you for hugging." "No," Bennie answered, his blue eyes twinkling with merriment, "nor has a real bear got anything on a Callthumpian for scaring a coward."

OKLAHOMA DEMANDING WHEAT GUARANTY PRICE

Ten Counties Face Bankruptcy if Such Action is Not Taken, Grain Expert Insists.

By United Press.

Oklahoma City, Okla., Jan. 17.—Bankruptcy of ten Oklahoma counties and serious embarrassment of as many more hinges on congress making effective its wheat price guarantee. This was the solemn warning here today of John Fields, grain expert. He expects congress to repudiate Wilson's pledge.

Practically the entire acreage of ten southwestern Oklahoma counties, Fields declared, was put to wheat last fall in response to the government's fervent appeal for bread and its promise of $2.26 a bushel at harvest. After two crop failures, these farmers have staked their last hopes on the 1919 wheat yield. They borrowed $773,271 from the government seed wheat fund, he says, at 6 per cent and gave crop mortgages and despite labor difficulties, total acreage has been increased ten per cent. "And all congress has to do to ruin them is to do nothing", Fields said.

WANT GOVERNORS TO TAKE UP LABOR PROBLEM

Senator Kenyon and Others Propose Conference in Washington by State Executives.

By United Press.

Washington, January 17.—A conference of governors here to work out plans with the department of labor for putting the growing army of the unemployed to work at once was proposed today by Senator Kenyon, Iowa.

Kenyon and some other members of congress are alarmed at rapid increase of unemployment and the lack of any effective government plan for providing work. There is no lack of ideas in congress for creating jobs in the future, but how to supply work now is the problem worrying legislators.

"I am going to suggest to the de-

We have delivered our ultimatum: Pure meats of high quality, satisfactory service and proper prices will always be our watchword. We will never recede from this position.

D. W. WILSON, VETERAN OF CIVIL WAR, DIES HERE

Retired Farmer Passes Away After Long Illness With Heart Disease.

Daniel W. Wilson, aged seventy-one, a veteran of the civil war, died Thursday evening at 8:30 o'clock at his home on North Ewing street, following a long illness with heart and kidney trouble. Seven weeks ago his condition developed a critical stage and he had steadily grown weaker until his death.

Mr. Wilson was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Wilson, of Jennings county. He was born in 1848 near Geneva. When the civil war broke out he entered the service and became attached to Co. H, 145, regiment of infantry. After hostilities had ceased and civilian life again took on its normal aspect he was mustered out of the army. In 1870 he married Miss Marietta Ryan, daughter of William Ryan, of Jackson county. Twenty seven years ago as retired farmers, he and Mrs. Wilson came to Seymour. During the time he lived here Mr. Wilson was an active member of the Odd Fellows, treasurer of the Grange for eight years and a member of the G. A. R. As a churchman he was affiliated with the First Methodist Church.

The deceased is survived by a widow, three brothers, Henry of Azalia, Joe, of Elizabethtown, and William of Sharpville one sister, Miss Clara Wilson, Columbus. Two sons, his only children, died at the ages of four and fifteen respectively.

The funeral will be conducted at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon from the Reddington church, Rev. Charles W. Whitman, pastor of the First M. E. church, officiating. Burial at the Reddington cemetery.

Clark E. McIntire Dead.

Clark E. McIntire, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. McIntire, residing two miles south of the city, died at the home of his parents this morning at 3:40 o'clock. His death was the result of pneumonia with which he was attacked one week ago. Funeral services, conducted by the Rev. Charles W. Whitman, pastor of the First Methodist church, will be held at the home 1:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon. Burial at Riverview cemetery. The Odd Fellows with whom Mr. McIntire was affiliated will attend in a body. The deceased is survived by a mother and father, one sister, Mrs. Maggie Gorbett, and three brothers, Mark of Farmington, George of Seymour, and Marion in military service overseas.

STRENGTH

SERVICE

WEAKNESS REMAINS LONG AFTER

Influenza

Reports Show That Strength, Energy and Ambition Return Very Slowly to Cripple Patients.

After an attack of influenza, doctors advise that nature be assisted in its building-up process by the use of a good tonic—one that will not only put strength and endurance into the body, but will also help to build up and strengthen the run-down cells of the brain.

One of the most highly recommended remedies to put energy into both body and brain is Bio-feren—your physician knows the formula—it is printed below.

There's iron in Bio-feren—the kind of iron that makes red blood corpuscles and creates vigor. There is lecithin also; probably the best brain invigorator known to science. Then there is good old reliable gentian, that brings back your lagging appetite.

There are other ingredients that help to promote good health, as you can see by reading this formula, not forgetting kolo, that great agent that puts the power of endurance into weak people.

Taken altogether Bio-feren is a splendid active tonic that will greatly help any weak, run-down person to regain normal strength, energy, ambition and endurance.

Bio-feren is sold by all reliable druggists and is inexpensive. For weakness after influenza patients are advised to take two tablets after each meal and one at bed time—even a day, until health, strength and vigor are fully restored.

It will not fail to help you and if for any reason you are dissatisfied with results your druggist is authorized to return your money upon request—without any red tape of any kind.

Note to physicians: There is no secret about the formula of Bio-feren. It is printed on every package. Here it is: Lecithin; Calcium Glycero-phosphate; Iron Peptonate; Manganese Peptonate; Ext. Nux. Vomica; Powdered Gentian; Phenolphthalein; Oleoresin Capsicum; Kolo.

RAINBOW'S END

A NOVEL
BY REX BEACH
AUTHOR OF
"THE IRON TRAIL" "THE SPOILERS" "HEART OF THE SUNSET" ETC.
COPYRIGHT, BY HARPER AND BROTHERS.

When Rosa at last appeared, O'Reilly felt called upon to tell her, somewhat dizzily, that she was beyond doubt the sweetest flower on all the Quinta de Esteban, and since this somewhat hackneyed remark was the boldest speech he had ever made to her, she blushed prettily, flashing him a dimpled smile of mingled pleasure and surprise.

"Oh, but I assure you I'm in no sweet temper," said she. "Just now I'm tremendously angry."

"Why?"

"It's that stepmother—Isabel. If she dreamed that I see you as often as I do—Well—" Rosa lifted her eloquent hands and eyes heavenward. "I suppose that's why I enjoy doing it—I so dearly love to spite her."

"I see!" O'Reilly puckered his brows and nodded. "But why, in that case, haven't you seen me oftener? We might just as well have made the good lady's life totally unbearable."

"Silly! She knows nothing about it." With a flirtatious sigh Rosa added: "That's what robs the affair of its chief pleasure. Since it does not bother her in the least, I think I will not allow you to come any more."

After judicious consideration, O'Reilly pretended to agree.

"There's no fun in wreaking a horrible revenge, when your enemy isn't wise to it," he acknowledged. "Since it's your idea to irritate your stepmother, perhaps it would annoy her if I made love directly to her."

Rosa giggled, and then inquired, naively, "Can you make love, senior?"

"Can I? It's the one ability an O'Reilly inherits. Listen to this now." Reaching forth, he took Rosa's fingers in his: "Wait!" he cried as she resisted. "Pretend that you're Mrs. Varona, your own stepmother, and that this is her dimpled hand I'm holding."

"Oh-h!" The girl allowed his grasp to remain. "But Isabel's hand isn't dimpled: it's thin and bony. I've felt it on my ears often enough."

"Don't interrupt," he told her. "Isabel, my little darling—"

"Isabel!" exclaimed a voice, and the lovers started guiltily apart. They turned to find Esteban, Rosa's twin brother, staring at them oddly. "Isabel?" he repeated. "What's this?"

"You interrupted our theatricals. I was rehearsing an impassioned proposal to your beloved stepmother," O'Reilly explained, with a pretense of annoyance.

"Yes, Senior O'Reilly believes he can infuriate Isabel by laying siege to her. He's a foolish person—" Rosa's cheeks were faintly flushed and her color deepened at the amusement in Esteban's eyes. "He makes love wretchedly."

"What little I overheard wasn't bad," Esteban declared; then he took O'Reilly's hand.

Esteban was a handsome boy, straight, slim and manly, and his resemblance to Rosa was startling. With a look engaging in its frank directness, he said: "Rosa told me about your meetings here and I came to apologize for our stepmother's discourtesy. I'm sorry we can't invite you into our house, but—do you understand? Rosa and I are not like her; we are quite liberal in our views; we are all-American, as you see. I dare say that's what makes Isabel hate Americans so bitterly."

"Wouldn't it please her to know that I'm becoming Cubanized as fast as ever I can?" ventured the caller.

"Oh, she hates Cubans, too!" laughed the brother. "She's Spanish, you know. Well, it's fortunate you didn't see her today. Br-r! What a temper! She'll walk in her sleep tonight, if ever."

Rosa nodded soberly, and O'Reilly, suppressing some light reply that had sprung to his lips, inquired, curiously, "What do you mean by that?"

Brother and sister joined in explaining that Donna Isabel was given to peculiar actions, especially after periods of excitement or anger, and that one of her eccentricities had taken the form of somnambulist wanderings. "Oh, she's crazy enough," Esteban concluded. "I believe it's her evil conscience."

O'Reilly scanned the speaker silently for a moment; then he said, with a gravity unusual in him, "I wonder if you know that you're suspected of working for the insurrecto cause."

"Indeed? I didn't know."

"Well, it's a fact," O'Reilly heard Rosa gasp faintly. "Is it true?" he asked.

"I am a Cuban."

"Cuban? Your people were Spanish."

"True. But no Spaniard ever raised a Spanish child in Cuba. We are Cubans, Rosa and I. I go everywhere, and the Spanish officers talk plainly before me. Somebody must be the eyes and the ears for Colonel Lopez."

"Colonel Lopez?" exclaimed O'Reilly. Esteban nodded.

Rosa's face, as she looked at the two men, was white and worried. For a time the three of them sat silent; then the American said, slowly, "You'll be shot if you're caught."

"Some one must run chances," Esteban averred. "We're fighting tyranny; all Cuba is ablaze. I must do my part."

"But sooner or later you'll be discovered—then what?" persisted O'Reilly.

Esteban shrugged. "Who knows? There'll be time enough when—"

"What of Rosa?"

At this question the brother stirred uneasily and dropped his eyes. O'Reilly laid a hand upon his arm. "You have no right to jeopardize her safety. Without you, to whom could she turn?"

The girl flashed her admirer a grateful glance.

"Senior, you for one would see that she—"

"But—I'm going away," O'Reilly felt rather than saw Rosa start, for his face was averted. "I came here to tell you both good-by. I may be gone for some time. I—I don't know when I can get back."

"I'm sorry," Esteban told him, with genuine regret. "We have grown very fond of you. But you will come back before long, eh? You're one of us. In the meantime I'll remember what you say, and at least I'll be careful." By no means wanting in tact, Esteban rose briskly and, after shaking hands with O'Reilly, left the two lovers to say farewell as best suited them.

But for once O'Reilly's ready tongue was silent. The laughter was gone from his blue eyes when he turned to the girl at his side.

"You say you are going away?" Rosa inquired, breathlessly. "But why?"

"I'm going partly because of this war and partly because of—something else. I tried to tell you yesterday, but I couldn't. When the revolution started everybody thought it was merely a local uprising, and I wrote my company to that effect; but, bless you, it has spread like fire, and now the whole eastern end of the island is ablaze. Business has stopped, and my employers have ordered me home to find out what's happened to their profits."

"You said there was something else—"

O'Reilly's hesitation became an embarrassed silence. He tried to laugh it off.

"There is; otherwise I'd stay right here and tell my penurious friends to whistle for their profits. It seems I'm cursed with a fatal beauty. You may have noticed it? No? Well, perhaps it's a magnificent business ability that I have. Anyhow, the president of my company has a notion that I'd make him a good son-in-law."

"—Oh!" cried Rosa.

And at her tone O'Reilly hurried on: "These rich men have the most absurd ideas. I suppose I'll have to—"

"Then you are in love, senior?"

The young man nodded vigorously. "Indeed I am—with the sweetest girl in Cuba. That's the whole trouble. That's why I'm hurrying home to resign before I'm fired." Not daring to look too long or too deeply into Rosa Varona's eyes until she had taken in the whole truth, he waited, staring at his feet. "I'm sort of glad it has come to a show-down and I can speak out. I'm hoping she'll miss me." After a moment he ventured, "Will she—er—will you, Rosa?"

"I? Miss you?" Rosa lifted her brows in pretended amazement. "You are amusing, of course, but—I won't have much time to think about you, for I am so soon to be married."

"Married? What? Nonsense!"

"Indeed! Do you think I'm so ugly nobody would have me? The richest man in Matanzas has asked for my hand this very afternoon."

"Who? Mario de Castano?"

"Yes."

O'Reilly laughed with relief, and though Rosa tried to look offended, she was forced to smile. "He's fat, I know," she admitted, "and he makes funny noises when he breathes; but he is richer than Croesus, and I adore rich men."

"I hate 'em!" announced O'Reilly. Then for a second time he took Rosa's dimpled hand, saying, earnestly: "I'm sure you know now why I make love so badly, dear. It's my Irish conscience. And you'll wait until I come back, won't you?"

"Will you be gone—very long?" she asked.

O'Reilly looked deeply now into the dark eyes turned to his, and found that at last there was no coquetry in them anywhere—nothing but a lonesome, hungry yearning—and with a glad, incoherent exclamation he held out his arms. Rosa Varona crept into them; then with a sigh she upturned her lips to his.

"I'll wait forever," she said.

Do Away With Mental Lapses.

There's little difference between the pupil that sits gazing blankly out of the window and the man who sits at the desk conscious of much to do but unable to start things. A truant mind is sure to embarrass any one who permits mental lapses. What right have you to be dreaming of the girl you might have married when you have tied up to another? What's the use of fussing about the order you lost yesterday? Nothing you can do today can redeem it. The only thing possible is to take your medicine like a man and fortify yourself with everything needed to land the next one. Forget the past and make the present count. After all you are living today and have hope only for tomorrow. Think in terms of making the most of what you have and the result will be entered on the credit side of the ledger.

SMOTHERING SPELLS

And Dizziness Relieved By Black-Draught, Says Ohio Lady.

Coalton, Ohio.—Mrs. Lucy J. Beatty, of R. F. D. 1, this place, writes: "Some time ago I had a great deal of trouble with my stomach. It seemed there was a hard lump formed in my stomach. This lump was sore and every time I would eat I would feel bloated and pained me terribly. It would seem to come up toward my chest."

I would have smothering spells and feel dizzy. I would start across the floor and would have to sit down. At night I smothered so I couldn't sleep. I would go to bed and wake with a start and feel like I would smother to death. . . . The doctors said it was my age and doctored and doctored, and I didn't get any better."

I was almost discouraged so I began to look around for other remedies and while reading the Almanac I decided to try Black-Draught, which I did. I bought two packages and took it regular for awhile and it cured me and I don't have any more trouble of that kind."

If you suffer from stomach and liver troubles, give Thedford's Black-Draught a trial. It has helped thousands of others—why not you? All druggists. NCB-16

UNIFORM RATES

Proposed for Service of Notaries in Indiana.

By United Press.

Indianapolis, January 17.—The bill introduced by Senator Wolfson, of Indianapolis, providing that notary publics shall charge a uniform rate on protests on commercial is the most concise bill introduced thus far in the legislature, it was learned today.

The administration tax bill introduced by Representative Charles L. Mendenhall, is the longest measure introduced, and includes more words than were introduced during any entire day in the 1917 session of the legislature. The Mendenhall tax bill covers more than two hundred pages of typewritten sheets.

13 DOESN'T WORRY HIM.

Representative Lowe Not Even Concerned About Friday.

By United Press.

Indianapolis, January 17.—More than a number is required to disturb Representative Richard Lowe, of Crawfordsville, it was learned today when he admitted that he was not worried in the least because of the fact that he occupied seat number thirteen in the House. Not even the hoo doo of Friday appears to worry representative from Crawfordsville as he appeared smiling as usual in his hoodooed seat today. Representative Lowe introduced two bills on the thirteenth, and these were among the first thirteen bills introduced in the House on the thirteenth of the month.

Gail Hopewell spent the day in Indianapolis on business.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Get Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth" now and then—a bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver and are constipated, you'll find quick, sure and only pleasant results from one or two little Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime.

Thousands take one or two every night just to keep right. Try them. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I was very weak, always tired, my back ached, and I felt sickly most of the time. I went to a doctor and he said I had nervous indigestion, which added to my weak condition kept me worrying most of the time—and he said if I could not stop that, I could not get well. I heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound my husband wanted me to try it. I took it for a week and felt a little better. I kept it up for three months, and I feel fine and can eat anything now without distress or nervousness."

—Mrs. J. WORTHLINE, 2842 North Taylor St., Philadelphia Pa.

The majority of mothers nowadays overdo, there are so many demands upon their time and strength; the result is invariably a weakened, run-down, nervous condition with headaches, backache, irritability and depression—and also more serious ailments develop. It is at such periods in life that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will restore a normal healthy condition, as it did to Mrs. Worthline.

NEWSY PARAGRAPHS

A twelve pound son was born yesterday to Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Harper at their home, corner Third and Central avenue.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary Leach was held this morning at the Central Christian church at 10 o'clock. The funeral was largely attended.

Mrs. Carroll Bush who was reported yesterday to be ill with influenza, is suffering only from a cold. Her condition is much improved.

Mrs. C. B. Hagan received word this morning that Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Wilford, of New Orleans, are both better. Dr. and Mrs. J. M. Shields left Wednesday morning in response to a message notifying them of the illness of their daughter, Mrs. Wilford and her husband.

John E. Miller, who is with the American army of occupation in Germany, writes from Oberwesel on the Rhine that he is located in that town which he describes as quite a beautiful place. The village is located in a valley on the banks of the river Rhine. Overlooking it on the hillside stand the ruins of an old castle which required about one thousand years in building. The castle was built of slate and was all done by hand work. On the sloping hillside beyond the castle are acres of vineyards.

Among the out-of-town people who attended the funeral of R. R. Short yesterday were Dr. George Short, of Kirksville, Mo., Frank Woodmansee, of Indianapolis, William Russell, of Russells Chapel, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Knost and daughter, Lolo, of Brownstown, Miss Nettie Russell, of Brownstown, Mrs. Clara Rust of Washington, Charles Rust, of Franklin, Andrew Rust, of near Cortland, Henry Persinger and family, Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Robertson, James Robertson, Lizzie Robertson, all of Shieldstown, and Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Roberts, of Hamilton township.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur P. Carter, West Fourth street, have just received a letter from their son, Harry Carter, U. S. naval gun pointer, stating that since Jan. 5, he has been in the naval hospital at Brooklyn, N. Y., undergoing treatment for blood poison which resulted from a cut he received on the hand while handling barbed wire. Until to-day they had heard nothing of his whereabouts since October 20. On that date he wrote them that he was about to sail on an oil collier but could not state from what point.

SUFFRAGE BILL IS BEFORE THE HOUSE

dential electors who are to be voted for, and the ballots cast by women citizens shall be canvassed with other ballots for presidential electors.

"Prior to any presidential election, for which male voters are required to register, women citizens shall also register in the same place and manner as male voters, provision being made for women citizens to register separately by those whose duty it is to provide for registration of male voters."

The new amendment which Senator Beardsley will introduce in the Senate as soon as his original measure is rejected will provide that the voters of the state must be citizens. This will entitle women to vote and will require foreigners to complete their naturalization and become full citizens before being granted right of suffrage. Mrs. Edwards said today that "there is increasing sentiment in favor of both provisions as the majority of people feel the necessity of confining the vote to citizens."

SOCIAL EVENTS

SAN SOUCI

She left at midnight for San Carlos, Ariz., where she will teach in the government Indian school there. The

Time Brings Joy And Happiness

As the Hours Pass the Coming of Baby Draws Nearer—Are You Prepared?

No woman awaiting the joy of coming motherhood should allow the days to pass without using the wonderful penetrating application, Mothers' Friend. By its regular use throughout the period the system is prepared for the coming event and strain and tension is relieved. It renders the broad, flat abdominal muscles pliant and they readily yield to nature's demand for expansion. As a result the nerves are not drawn upon with that peculiar wrenching strain, and nausea, nervousness, bearing down and stretching pains are counteracted. The abdomen expands easily when baby arrives and the hours at the crisis are naturally less. Pain and danger as a consequence is avoided. Mother's Friend not only allays distress in advance, but assures a speedy recovery for the mother. The skin is kept soft and smooth and natural and free from disfigurement. Write to the Bradford Regulator Company, Dept. J, Lamar Building, Atlanta, Georgia, for their Motherhood Book, and procure a bottle of Mother's Friend from the druggist. It is just as standard as anything you can think of.
